● HOW many times do we have to tell you? Do not over-pack or you'll be hit by excess luggage charges.

Online travel agents Expedia reckon we spent a horrifying £270million on overweight bags this year.

They found 40 per cent of us spend between one and two days preparing for our hol, but 27 per cent admit to spending less than an hour packing. And almost three quarters – 73 per cent – admitted to not using everything they packed.

So the message is . . . take more time to pack less.

Don't give any more cash to the airlines than you need to.

RYANAIR have failed to hand over their August punctuality figures due to "technical issues at the data source".

What happened? Did the dog eat them?

This from the firm who have in the past got very excited about easyJet's failure to publish punctuality figures.

Anything to say, Mr O'Leary? Meanwhile new figures show that SAS are the world's most punctual airline.
